

Annual Masquerade Ball Introduces Paul Phillips And His 10-Piece Band

Tickets Go on General
Sale Today on Campus

This year, following its previous custom of introducing new orchestras to the McGill Campus, the Cosmopolitan Club has brought in Paul Phillips and his ten-piece band to play for the Annual Masquerade Ball. Although unknown on the McGill campus, Phillips has a considerable reputation around the city, where he plays for many of the more exclusive functions. He is also well-known in Eastern Canada as the orchestra which has, for three years, played regularly at the Seignior Club and which has also often appeared at the Hunt Club.

This orchestra is best known for its renditions of the sweet and mellow. However, the Dance Committee has emphasized that there will be plenty of variety to suit all tastes, since the orchestra has promised to play a special selection suggested by the committee in the light of their knowledge of campus needs and favourites. A special feature of the evening will be a number of Viennese waltzes for which the orchestra is preparing by special request.

The last new orchestra to be introduced to the campus by the Masquerade Ball was Johnny Holmes, then known as the Esquires, who played at this dance in the Union

Ball-room two years ago. At that time the Esquires were almost unknown, both upon the campus and in the city itself. However, during the past two years they have become better and better known until they are now one of the most popular orchestras at McGill.

The Masquerade Ball is the one really big annual costume event

upon the campus, and every year, except the 1941-1942 session when it was not held owing to financial difficulties within the club, it is attended by a number of distinguished patrons, including both members of the consular and diplomatic staffs of many nations and also representatives from the University teaching body. This year the committee expects the Masquerade to be bigger and better than ever before, both because a far larger budget has been laid out than ever before and also because the tickets, which go on sale today, are limited to two hundred in number to prevent overcrowding.

Future Writers Offered Grants

Dodd, Mead Prize
Gives Opportunity
For Undergrads

February 12, (C.U.P.)—A prize of $1,200 is being offered in the Dodd, Mead Intercollegiate Literary Fellowship to students in Canadian and American universities who wish to become professional writers.

The Dodd, Mead Literary Fellowship is designed to give undergraduates an opportunity to take advantage of Faculty advice while planning and writing a novel. The basis on which the fellowship is awarded is on promise shown in the submitted project and a completed manuscript is not necessary.

Candidates for a Bachelor's degree and graduates in residence for a Master's degree are the only undergraduates eligible to submit projects.

Deadline for Campus Life Photos Set for Monday

Monday, February 15, is the last day of the second Campus Life Contest. All entries must be in on or before that date. No exceptions will be made for late contestants, states the Photography-Editor.

Entries should be 3" x 4", or 3" x 5", if possible, and left at the Union Tuck Shop. Up to date many enthusiastic camera fans have entered the contest, stated a member of the executive. The photographs entered have been of a varied nature, covering practically every phase of college activity. There is yet a lack of R.V.C. shots; and military training is featured very little. It is hoped this will be remedied before the contest closes.

Theory of the Leisure Class And its Institutions is Debated

Harold Finestone of the Sociology Department and Boris Garmaise of Law discussed the economic and social theories of Thorstein Veblen at a meeting of the Political Economy Club last night.

Finestone opened the discussion with a brief resume of the Norwegian-American's career from a Minnesota farm to the lecture halls of several American universities. He described Veblen's theory of the evolution of economic institutions. Veblen traced the development of these economic institutions from the era of the savages, then the barbarians, thirdly the handicraft period and finally the age of modern machine technology. Garmaise dealt more fully with this latter category of economic institutions.

Veblen attempted to explain the conservatism of the leisure class in terms of their exclusion from the sphere of industrial production, and the lack of economic pressure on their immediate position.

Garmaise outlined Veblen's theories of economic processes in business and industry. His economic analysis dealt largely with trade cycles, which he was one of the first to explain.

The next meeting of the Political Economy Club will hear addresses on "The Third Republic and The Third Reich."

Annual Board Sets Deadline

Club Material, Pictures Must Be in Monday

The Annual board is sending out a final reminder to all campus clubs and societies, that the deadline for all club pictures and write-ups is Monday, February 15. No material submitted after this date will be accepted.

"It is imperative," emphasizes the Editor-in-Chief, "that all material be in on time. The slower the material, the slower the Annual, and no exceptions will be made for late material. So, every club plays a vital part in sending 'Old McGill' to press."

The write-ups should consist of 180-240 words, and must be written in the past tense. Representatives should consult former Annuals, either in the Annual office or in the Library, if they need ideas as to how to go about writing up their club activities.

Appointments for executive group pictures are to be made with Jacoby Studios not later than the deadline Monday. These pictures may be left at the Union Tuck Shop and must be accompanied by the names of the members of the executive according to the seating arrangement in the picture.

This will be the one event this year at which the coeds will be expected to escort their men-friends, and pay all expenses involved in the evening's entertainment.

The entertainment will consist of tobogganing down the Park Slide, of skating on the rink, and of dancing in the Park Slide House in stockinged feet.

The Coast is being sponsored by the M.W.S.A.A.

I.V.C.F. Hears Dr. Kilpatrick

Importance of Solving Moral Problems Stressed

At a luncheon held yesterday Dr. Kilpatrick spoke to the McGill Christian Fellowship on the things which separate men from God. He pointed out that the chief difficulties are usually moral problems in the individual life.

"Although intellectual problems certainly exist, they are usually used as an excuse where men are actually unwilling to make the adjustments in their own lives that Christ demands."

The speaker then went on to explain how spiritual peace is obtained by facing these moral problems and placing them before the Lord. He told how a living Christ then helps those who put their trust in Him, and leads them, in the way of the Lord.

Establishment of Varsity Naval Unit is Announced

Similar Move Is Expected At McGill, Queens, Western

Toronto (C.U.P.)—An University Naval Training Division will be established at the University of Toronto, the Registrar has announced.

Any male students who are not enrolled in the C.O.T.C., or in the U.A.T.C., may join the division and train for the remainder of the present session, provided that they agree to enter the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve or to join up on active service with the Navy, before next session opens.

Next year the Division will open to all males, except Medical and Dental students, who agree to enlist in active service at the end of their work at the university. Thus, next year, the Naval Division will be on a par with the other reserve units around the college.

This new naval unit will officially be part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York, and will be commanded from the ship, with a special ship's office at the Varsity for the division.

A naval representative, whose name was not mentioned in the dispatch sent to the Daily, will outline the plan to interest students at a meeting to be held tomorrow evening. At this time the whole outline of the plan will be presented and such questions as may arise will be answered.

Arrangements have been made to allow for the appointment of a member of the faculty to the position of division commanding officer, as has become usual in such reserve units in universities.

It is expected by both students and officials of Varsity that similar moves will be made in a short space of time at three other Canadian Universities, namely, McGill, Western and Queen's. It is further expected that the inauguration of these divisions in these three universities will take place within a brief space of time.

Students and Professors Consider Wartime Studies

Labour Club to Sponsor Round-Table Discussion

On Thursday evening, February 18th, the Student Labour Club is sponsoring an open Staff Forum on the topic, "The Function of a University in Wartime," in the Union Grill Room, with several staff members participating.

Professor David L. Thomson, Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, who is maintaining a close contact with federal authorities in Ottawa heads the list of speakers; Dr. Raymond Boyer of the Department of Chemistry, Dr. Hovos of the Department of Electrical Engineering, and Dr. Steinberg of the Genetics Department will be amongst those presenting their views on the subject.

The plans for the meeting are now being completed, and invitations are being sent out to various other well-known staff members, students, and prominent citizens to partake in the forum. The executive of the club "would like to stress that all persons attending will be given an opportunity to express their opinions and help to clarify the confused positions in which most students find themselves.

Among the subjects to be discussed will be the position of universities in other Allied countries, Selective Service in relation to university manpower, acceleration of courses, the position and function of the Arts courses, Student Staff Councils, and other phases of a university total war program.

The meeting will proceed as follows: Each speaker will deliver a short talk on the subject; this will be followed by a discussion period amongst the speakers, to be followed in turn by an open discussion amongst all persons attending.

The full details of the forum will be announced in a later issue of the Daily.

On Sunday, February 14th at 7.30 p.m. a chapel service for all students at McGill will be held in Divinity Hall, at which the Rev. Cameron will speak on "The Divine Challenge". The Rev. Blake Sewell Will Play For Arts and Science In Formal This Evening

C.O.T.C. Parade Advanced
An Hour Because of Hop

The Hearts and Sighs' Hop, now an annual event, will take place tonight in the Ballroom of the Union. The music of Blake Sewell will be featured, along with a floor show from the Trocadero.

Tickets, of which few are left, may be purchased at Bill Gentleman's office in the Arts Building, or at the Union Tuck Shop.

Special arrangements have been made with the C.O.T.C. officials to permit of students going directly to the Hop from their Parades.

Parade Hour Advanced. The hour of the C.O.T.C. parade in the Craig Street Armoury has been advanced from 1930 hours (7.30) to 1830 hours (6.30) in order that those going to the dance will be enabled to arrive there in time.

Students will be permitted to wear their uniforms to the dance, and will be permitted also to wear soft shoes to their parades provided that they have on overshoes, and do not wear gaiters.

The decorations will be as usual for a Valentine Dance, and will consist of Hearts and Cupids and all the other accoutrements of February 14. By a system of illusory lighting, the ceiling of the Ballroom will be lowered so as to provide a cosier and more genial atmosphere, and to impart to the hall a larger appearance by the seeming reduction of the ceiling's height.

A member of the Committee planning the Arts and Science Dance stated the following about the decorations: "In order to eliminate the cold, bare, high ceiling of the Union Ballroom, a system of unusual lighting has been planned for the dance. This lighting which will make the ceiling lower will create a more cosy and intimate atmosphere and change the ballroom into a warm and desirable place."

Blake Sewell and his band, who will play at the hop, are often called upon to provide the music for McGill dances. They were at this (Continued on Page Four)

Student Body's Health Good

Over 88% Fit for Military Training
Urquhart Says

February 12, (C.U.P.)—Colonel Urquhart, Director of the University Health Service, claimed that "the health of the student body is not bad." The Health Service examined 3,360 male students before the end of January, and found that 2,961 are fit for military training. Of that number 2,597 are fit for any type of service.

The Colonel also stated that there is less infection at the University than in the rest of the population. He feels that the students are ill less often than they were before military training came in.

The 339 men who are unfit constitute 11.5 per cent. which is slightly lower than for the general population. Visual defect is the major factor placing students in lower categories.

The annual physical examination is only compulsory for military purposes. Such an annual examination is felt by the authorities to be highly desirable and therefore may be made compulsory.

Radio Workshop Casts New Play

Original Comedy Will Run for Thirty Minutes

Castings for the Radio Workshop's latest production will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m., in the Union Music Room. The play, "Two's Company," a light comedy, written by Allan Thompson, will be recorded at station CKAC on the following Saturday. There is another play to be cast at the same time, and the executive request that all members be present. This is the first 30 minute recording which the Radio Workshop has attempted.

The Workshop has just completed two Radio broadcasts on behalf of the National Nutrition Campaign. These broadcasts constitute a new step in the group's efforts, as they were the first direct over-the-air performances presented.

Opinions Vary On Conference

Toronto Students Query Value of Conference Report

Toronto, (C.U.P.)—The opinion of students at Varsity on the recently-released report of the Student-Staff Conference is by no means unanimous. In a recent informal investigation into campus sentiments on the subject, the Varsity staff ascertained that although opinion generally favoured the holding of the conference, its recommendations were not entirely approved by the students.

The main issue in question was whether the conference, as instanced in its published report, has achieved any definite advance in determining the exact status of students in relation to the country's war effort. Most students apparently agreed with President Cody that the appointment of a University Selective Service Board, as advised by the Conference, was an unnecessary step at the present stage, and some even stated that "we are no further ahead than last September."

There was firm agreement however with the attitudes expressed in President Cody's speech, in which it was stated that the call-up of all students will be left finally in the hands of National Selective Service officials. Similar appraisal and great relief was the reaction (Continued on Page Four)

"Old McGill"

The McGill Annual is a yearly publication edited by undergraduates to record the activities of students during the current year. Traditionally known as "Old McGill," the Annual is a history of students and of student affairs, attempting at the same time to capture the spirit and temperament existing on the Campus at the time of its issue.

The Annual carries with it a great deal of the prestige and dignity attached to the name of McGill. It makes no attempt to include in it any petty high-school material, nor does it pretend to be a literary magazine. "Old McGill" attempts to be an indication of what the campus was like when you attended; it attempts to be a permanent reminder of a person's most formative period in life, his undergraduate days at college.

Divided into several sections the Annuals pictures the different phases of student life in an orderly fashion. The biography section especially tries to emphasize the historical data of the graduating student while at college; while the pictures in this section are constant reminders of friends and acquaintances made as undergraduates. In this way the Annual carries with it a personal appeal to every graduating student. In fact it is the only record available of what students and their friends have done while at college.

The campus life section stresses the informality and day to day doings of the individual student and professor. It intends to capture the spirit of the main events taking place during the college year. These photos are a record of the activities and personalities on the campus.

The clubs and societies section pictures extensively the extra-curricular activities at the University. As well as covering the main campus organizations, this section also deals with the sports activities of students. It pictures an active student program happening outside the usual academic atmosphere.

This year, more than ever before, "Old McGill" appeals to all students for their co-operation in helping to make their yearbook a success. The shortage of help at the printers makes them insist that this year's deadlines be strictly maintained, and they even request that they be cut short, if it is at all possible. The Annual Board laboured with academic studies and military training, and a shortage of experienced help, is therefore asking all students concerned to help by handing in their club pictures and write-ups as soon as possible. Campus Life pictures are also being called for, and without the co-operation of all students, the Annual Board this year cannot make "Old McGill '43" a truly representative student yearbook.

President of the Women's Union

The Women's Union comprises the women undergraduates in the various faculties, who may vote in the approaching election for its president and secretary, as well as for the president of the Students' Society. Each member of the Women's Union has a direct responsibility in filling these positions. Whom they elect to the office of President of the Women's Union remains to be seen. It is of primary im-

French Spirit

The clay houses of the village looked as if they had been built of the same dust raised by the jeep as it rolled along the French colonial highway. Flying in the distance beyond the village, Richard Doren noted the tricolor flying from a high pole. Outlined against the sun, he could have sworn it was gold-rimmed. "Some colourful Commandant," he remarked as he remembered General MacArthur's gold-rimmed cap. Seymour laughed. Even if it were gold-rimmed, he doubted whether anyone could distinguish so fine a detail in the distance.

To the tune of "Armistices," the jeep passed the outskirts of the village then stopped suddenly before a tangled wood-and-barbed-wire barricade which protected the approach to a massive stone gate. Above the walls, the tricolor flew joyously and carved in stone above the entrance was the inscription "Fort-Dir-El-Abd."

Seymour jumped lightly from the jeep to push the barricade to one side of the road. Within a few seconds five Senegalese soldiers with bayonets drawn appeared as if from thin air.

portance that this position be clearly defined.

There are many aspects to the duties of the president of the Women's Union. She automatically becomes a member of the Students' Executive Council during her term of office—July 1 to June 30 of the following year. As such, she has a voice and vote on all matters of student government, as well as speaking for her own organization when occasion arises. She represents the women students on the campus, at University functions, and to outside organizations. She may be called to act on other executives. She conducts general meetings of the Women's Union and presides at Round Table Conferences as well as at frequent meetings of the executive.

With a large membership and only two general meetings a year, much of the active business of the Women's Union is carried on by the five members of the executive. The Round Table Conference group, however, consisting of the presidents of R.V.C. clubs and societies, class executives and Chairmen of special committees functions as an intermediate link between the executive and the constituent membership of the Women's Union. The president should see clearly the function of the Round Table Conference group, in coordinating the activities of the various classes, clubs, societies and committees, as well as making valuable recommendations and giving constructive criticism in general matters of programme and policy. Furthermore, she must have a keen interest in the activities of all organizations sponsored and financially supported by the Women's Union.

More specifically, the office should be filled by a person with executive ability, a person who has an insight into the administration of finances, and who will take responsibility in such things as amendments to the constitution of the Women's Union whenever such a need arises. Furthermore, the president should, during her term of office, come to envisage the Women's Union not merely in terms of its activity for one year, but on the broader basis of its future growth and developments in providing for the needs and interests of its membership and as an increasingly vital organization on the McGill Campus.

The Vice-President of The Union

The vice-president of the Union is a member of a three man committee which controls the McGill Union. His duties are laid down by the constitution of the McGill Union are to take the place of the president when necessary. Now this is the only duty assigned by the constitution. The vice-president is expected to share equally with his two conferees the complete responsibility of the administration of the largest single undergraduate organization on the campus.

At one time the Union was managed by a committee of men representing the various clubs and societies on the campus. At that time the duties were divided among the various members, each being responsible for a distinct department. It was felt some years ago that this system was unsatisfactory and the constitution was amended. The building is now managed by a three man committee.

Naturally with such a small number of men on the committee the work has become more centralized and greater efficiency is obtained. But this end may be obtained only if the three members are willing to share the responsibility and work together. Daily there are matters arising which call for the consideration of the president. Naturally he cannot attend to all these things himself and a large amount of work falls on the shoulders of the vice-president.

"These men aren't fooling," thought Dick as he reached for the air and noted that Seymour quickly followed suit.

"Allman ulla Inglesy," one of them shouted. Blank astonishment registered on both newcomers' faces. Then Doren, his hands still held high demanded brusquely, "Le Commandant, sil-vous-plait!"

The Senegalese exchanged a few words at the top of their voices, then one of them turned and ran back. The others didn't relax. Dick could feel the steel of the bayonet pressing against his chest. After three minutes during which the group remained posed like characters in a charade, the situation struck Doren as ludicrous. "Come on let's call off the act," he wanted to say. But their bodies remained rigid, their faces tight-lipped.

Suddenly, the doors of the gate opened in one swift movement. Two Senegalese who must have done a lot of rehearsing, fastened back the iron doors through which came a tall officer dressed in blue pantaloons, red short jacket and sandals, uniform of the French officers assigned to colonial desert troops. He walked toward the guard in an alert manner, at the same time examining both sides of the road as if to ascertain whether anything unusual might be happening there.

When he reached the barricade, he gave a few short orders and the Senegalese finally relaxed. He then climbed through the ditch around the barricade. As Dick jumped off the jeep, he saluted, then shook hands.

"Monsieur is American, yes?"

"Richard Doren, Chicago Herald." The officer turned to Seymour.

"Godfrey Seymour, British, British press representative."

"Monsieur is attached to British units landed here?" the officer queried.

"No. American units. There are no British units in this area."

"Did Monsieur say American units?"

"Yes, American. I'm surprised they aren't here yet. They're on their way up."

The officer looked at the road beyond and at the village. Then he turned toward the Senegalese and gave some instructions. As they removed the barricade, he said, "Will you be kind enough to come with me and see the Commandant?"

Dick opened the small doors of the jeep and the three men drove through the gates.

"Monsieur le Commandant, Monsieur Richard Doren, journaliste American; Monsieur Seymour de la presse Anglaise; Monsieur le Colonel de Verteuille."

"How do you do?"

"Glad to know you, Sir."

"Enchanté, messieurs."

The two correspondents looked around curiously. The walls of the room were white-washed, like the walls of the building outside. It was a low building above which rose the airport's small control tower like the minaret of a mosque. The room faced south and the greater part of the southern wall was taken up by a huge window. It allowed for a full view of the airport and beyond that could be seen mountains, miles away from the coastal plains. A few small planes were on the runway, their crews busy about them.

"Monsieur le lieutenant Dupuis informs me that you landed here with American troops, Monsieur Doren."

"Yes, sir, at dawn."

"Will you then permit me to ask a few questions? You understand that it is important for me to get as complete a picture of the situation as possible."

"There is no reason for my not telling you about it, colonel, the situation is well in our hands."

"That is what I wish to ascertain."

He walked to his desk. Lieutenant Dupuis pointed to two chairs and the two visitors took their places.

The Colonel seemed to be thinking. His eyes were fixed on the distant hills. Then he broke the silence.

"This aerodrome is the farthest point east on the coast; and its proximity to Italian and German bases in Sicily and Africa makes the burden of my responsibility very heavy." He paused for a moment, then continued, "Two days ago I sent Lieutenant Dupuis here, to the west for some electrical equipment; our generator broke down leaving us at the great disadvantage of not being able to communicate with our stations by radio. He was, unfortunately, not able to bring back the spare parts, but he did bring us some news... most indefinite news... Yesterday morning, however, Arabs from the village brought leaflets which were dropped from an aeroplane during the night." He indicated a bundle of leaflets on the desk.

On their face printed in large black type was the message, "RAISE THE AMERICAN FLAG IF YOU ARE PREPARED TO FIGHT AGAINST OUR COMMON ENEMY. IF YOU HAVE NO U.S.A. FLAG, FLY TWO TRI-COLORES."

"I must know," the colonel continued sharply, "if this is more than a commando attack."

"Absolutely, sir. We are landing on both the Mediterranean and Atlantic coasts of French Africa with forces equipped to handle any Axis-inspired resistance. We have come, as the leaflets say, to establish with you a common base of operations from which we shall fight for the liberation of France and the eventual freedom of Europe."

"I have not the slightest doubt, Monsieur Doren, as regards the American intentions. I hesitate to take any definite steps, however, because the Germans may yet intercept your army. I shall then be proclaimed a traitor to France and the power which I now possess to aid our cause will be taken out of my hands."

"No danger of that, Sir. Our troops will arrive here at any moment. And let me assure you we're strong enough to forestall even a direct enemy assault."

"For a moment the Colonel said nothing. His eyes were again fixed on the hills far to the south. Then he rose. He walked to the window as if trying to get nearer to the hills so that he could perceive more clearly a spot that had attracted his attention. He stood there for a while, then he turned:

"Bien, Monsieur. I was not even certain that those leaflets were dropped from American planes. It might have been a German trick to have me declare myself. Unfortunately you see, our light projectors are not working. They have no independent electrical units but are attached to the same broken generator. We were not able to identify the planes in the dark."

He stopped suddenly. The drone of engines could be heard in the sky. He led the way to the door, everybody ran out. High up in the north west, there were three formations of three heading for the airport. Men were running on the field towards the Colonel. A handful of pilots in full flying kit rushed out of a door: some Senegalese and French ground personnel, stripped to the waist, tore towards the planes. Several groups detached themselves and raced for the machinegun nests on the outskirts of the field. Engines were warmed up in a matter of seconds, while the pilots stood at attention waiting for orders.

"Probably American or British 'planes," shouted Seymour to the Colonel.

"Monsieur, I cannot afford to take any chances," he replied looking toward the gate and to the road leading to the village.

The planes were almost above us, still at a high level. With relief, Dick recognized the white star on the wings.

"Carrier based Grunmans, Colonel, American."

"Yes," he replied, following their movements with his eyes. He did not seem too certain of their friendliness.

The planes were circling the field, slightly losing altitude. One broke off and went into a dive. He passed directly over their heads between the white-washed building and the massive gate. Dick waved his arms for all he was worth. The plane was now gaining altitude in a steel angle. They turned toward the Colonel. His expression had not changed.

"Absurd," said Dick, "can't you see they are U.S. planes, insignia and type, brand new, just off the assembly line, good old American assembly line."

"Monsieur Doren," the Colonel shouted. "They are preparing to attack. Follow me."

Dick could not believe it but he ran. Just before they reached the building, a bomb landed in the field, then another, and another. A building shook and, like a piece of collapsible furniture, folded to the ground. Dick climbed painfully to his feet. The Colonel was already running upstairs to the control tower. Dick followed. Amid glass and wreckage, they found the radio operator bleeding and unconscious. Hardly noticing the man, the Colonel cleared his way to the control buttons. He snapped one, then the other. "We tried to connect some batteries to the radio, this morning. Useless. Both are useless."

—E. E. S.

Frankly, Dick thought of the leaflet.

"The flag, Colonel, two flags." They turned to look at the tricolor. The gate was only a pile of smoking debris.

"I had only one tricolor, monsieur."

Without hesitating longer, Dick ran out of the building. He was joined by Dupuis who seemed anxious to say something; but Dick didn't stop to listen. They headed for the jeep which was standing unharmed near the southern wall of the building. The planes were getting into position for another dive. Behind the driver's seat the stars-and-stripes lay beneath a pile of luggage. Dick grabbed it and threw one end to Dupuis. Together they rushed to the centre of the field and spread it on the ground. As they returned to the edge of the field, they were met by the Colonel, pistol in hand.

"You have acted without orders. Pick up that flag."

Half a dozen officers, a few pilots, were rushing to them from the four corners of the field. The crowd gathered quickly. Dick found himself the centre of a circle, facing the Colonel at a distance of about three feet. Dupuis was on his right.

"Lieutenant Dupuis, you have disobeyed orders," the old man shouted.

"You gave no orders, Monsieur le Colonel," Dupuis replied calmly.

"Never mind that! You were helping the enemy, the enemy who has bombed France and torn our flag to shreds. Capitaine Lubes you will lead what remains of the squadron to intercept..."

Suddenly great heaps of earth catapulted into the air, as if the field were vomiting itself up. Dick fell. He remembered a terrific sense of shock. No pain. A rushing darkness. Then nothing more.

He woke to the strong odour of antiseptic. Through a thick haze, he could hear Seymour's cheery voice, "Coming to, the lazy beggar, always just manages to beat the deadline."

"Steady there, now." As the greyness cleared, Dick looked up into the smiling face of a Yankee M.O. From there, he looked to the stern set-face of Dupuis.

"Vive la France," Dick whispered with a grin, trying to cock himself up on his elbow. Dupuis' face did not respond. There was an awkward quiet. The three men remained silent.

"The Colonel?" asked Dick.

"The Colonel is dead, Monsieur Doren, the same bomb," replied Dupuis, a great soldier who suffered like the tormented spirit of France...

"Time to go, gentlemen" announced the doctor brightly. Dick lay back on his pillows, felt his eyes close, too tired to think...

Hockey Season Reaches High Climax Tonight

Redmen Face Navy In N.D.H.L. Second To Last League Game

McGill Will Feature Young and Crutchfield On Starting Lineup

The Redmen will have their backs against the wall tonight at the Forum when they skate out to meet Hughie Farquharson's second place Navy sextet, who already have an edge over the Redmen on the season's play to date, of two victories to one. McGill must win their two remaining games to gain a tie for first place, while a victory for the R.C.A.F. Spitfires will assure the Flyers of at least a tie for the top spot, and sole position if Navy loses one of their games.

However, following the loss to the Air Force last Thursday night, the collegians are no longer masters of their destiny. YE TROPHY BECKONS.

The season is reaching an end and it is quite hard to predict who will end up on top. In their last game, against the Spitfires, McGill turned in an excellent effort, managing to lead the Flyers, who were at full strength, for two periods and then lose out by one point due to lack of reserve strength. In this game Bud Farmer turned in another excellent game, playing a smart brand of two way hockey all through the game. Bruce Ward will again carry the full load on the defence in this game as it appears that Herb Owen will be lost to the college squad for this game too.

Ross Ritchie played an excellent game in nets in the last game although six counters were slapped past him. This can be attributed to the lack of protection and the fact that the forward lines, without Crutchfield, were short of adequate replacements. Brian Little has been turning in better games of late on the defence and he should be all ready to go in this game and toss his weight where it will do the most good.

READ FAST

The man the Redmen will have to watch the closest will be little Pee-wee Read, who has jumped to third place among the scoring leaders and who has been a dangerous man at all times. Big Andy Anton will again carry the load for the Sailors on the defence and will attempt to use his weight in slowing up the McGill front lines but Anton has been slowing up as of late and this may allow the speedy McGill forwards to keep out of his way.

The final arrangements for the playoffs have been made and they were announced at the meeting held at M.D. 4. The playoffs will start on February 28 and will have the first and last place teams and second and third place teams fighting it out in a best of three series with the winners meeting in another best of three series for the championship.

Hickory Riders Trek To Bates Friday

(C.U.P.—Feb. 10—Vermont)

The University of Vermont ski team sails forth this Friday morning, on the long trek to Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, to open the current season in the annual I.S.U. meet which takes place there this week-end. Competing against such schools as M.I.T., Colgate, Syracuse, Colby, St. Lawrence, and Maine, the Green and Gold skiers will have ample opportunity to prove their mettle.

Led by versatile Capt. Art Paterson, the U.V.M. lads have an experienced line-up, but none have had the benefit of competition so far this year. Minus Johnny Hurst and freshman Doug Pierce the club has been strengthened considerably by the return of Brud Sutton, last year's captain. In addition to these two smooth performers, veteran Bud Pierce, Bob Goss, and Bob Goodell, will be entered for the Catamounts.

(Ithaca—Feb. 9.)

Handicapped by the loss of Ari Devlin, Syracuse's national ski jumping champion who has withdrawn from the University, Coach John Shaw's Orange skiers will enter the second round in the West-ern division meet of the Intercollegiate Ski Union here tomorrow.

Three teams topped the Orange total in the recent Lake Placid meet, but none of these combines is competing on the Cornell course. Other colleges in the two-day event, all of which have been beaten by the veteran Hill troupe, are Colgate, Cornell, Clarkson, and defending champion St. Lawrence.

should be carried on both trips, for as usual lunch will be eaten along the trail. A fire or two will be made and hot tea or chocolate served. Tour leaders will have the pails, etc., but a cup should be carried also if possible, a little tea and sugar or prepared chocolate.

ALL MEN AND WOMEN AT MCGILL ARE WELCOME ON ANY OF THE M.O.C. TOURS.

Plan to join one this week-end.

INTER-COMPANY SKI MEET

The Inter-Company Ski Meet has been postponed until Sunday, March 14th as the Zone Junior Down Hill and Slalom are being held at Ste. Sauveur on February 21st. The lists are still up in the gym and the locker room where they may be signed.

Results of Coed Archery Tournament Announced

The results of the Coed Inter-section Archery Tournament of January 28th and February 4th were announced yesterday. Eight sections competed, and the following archers came out on top. First—Lola Cochrane and Maira Cumming, section R1, total 431 points. Second—Jean McNab and Tamara Umanski, section R2, total 423 points. Third—Elaine Miner and Joanne Shaw, section B2, total 395 points.

The girls who represented the other sections were Dorothy Koch, Margaret Iverson, Cecily Freeman, Jean Hood, Joyce Beatty, Joyce Elder, Mildred Graham, Lucille McConnell. All the girls showed real enthusiasm, and archery is definitely coming to the fore as one of the most popular of outdoor and indoor sports at McGill.

The manager of the Archery Club has announced that this is by no means the end of the club's activities. Other tournaments are being planned, as well as competitions between the club members. Girls who have become disinterested because of lack of archery equipment are asked to come to the next practice and try out the excellent new equipment which has at last arrived. Five bows and two targets have just recently been purchased.

McGill Coeds Play Stanstead

Red Squad Will Be Chosen at Next Practices

Coeds attention! The glories of the ice lanes, and your manager, are calling once again for you to display some of that old competitive spirit that used to haunt the grounds of McGill. The girls have shown all the initiative this year in digging up competition for their sporting endeavours, and have given a good account of themselves in each case. Now that the hockey season is here they are once more swinging into action, and all are welcome to try their hand at this type of masculine sport.

Word was received from Stanstead College this week that they would like to seek their fortune against the Red girls again. Naturally the challenge was accepted and all that remains to be settled are time, place and similar details, and the coeds who will wear the Red and White into battle. It is suspected that the game will be held next Saturday (not at night), and therefore the team will have to be chosen after the next three practices. These sessions of shinny will take place this afternoon from 3-4, Wednesday from 2-3, and next Friday, also from 3-4, and all coeds interested in making the team a going concern are asked to turn out, to all of them if possible.

Park Slide Presents McGills With Night of Winter Frolicking

Tobogganing, Skating, and Dancing Features Tuesday Evening's Festivities at Mountain Clubhouse—Sadie Hawkins Will Attend

The spirit and soul of a struggling Sadie Hawkins will arrive in Montreal on Tuesday night at her Sadie Slide to slay the sheepish along with her staunchest knock 'em down, drag 'em out manner. In deference to war conditions, Sadie will stay to slomp the hunting grounds of Dogpatch—unless all the catchable males are uniformly disporting themselves in U.S.O. canteens.

The Coed Coast night will be the last stronghold of Sadie-ish females for the duration, and inside forces advise that if this will really be the case, Sadie Hawkins is due to vanish in a burst of snowy glory. Tickets will be $1.00 per couple, and refreshments are to be extra, amply providing for those wolfish appetites. Dancing, in heavy ski-socks, starts at 9:30 p.m. after a choice of skating or tobogganing down the Park Slide.

Dr. Roscoe, Prof. Benjamin Higgins of the economics department, and Mrs. Higgins, Miss Elnora Adams, of the School of Physical Education, and Robert Mackay will be chaperons for the event. Tickets may be bought from class executives, of R.V.C., and from gym-section representatives.

McGill M.B.L. Cage Entry To Oppose Pats in Important Match Tonight

Another Victory Will Assure Team of Spot in Playoffs

Tonight the Montreal Basketball League will give the fans another great exhibition of basketball as the McGill entry oppose the second place Pats in a league game scheduled to start in the Sir Arthur Currie Gym. at 8:00 p.m. The McGill team have won their last two games, and a win tonight will assure them a place in the playoffs. For these two reasons the encounter tonight will probably be marked by much fast action and exciting play.

The Redmen have shown a marked improvement in their play since their victory over St. Hubert two weeks ago. Most of the credit is due to the Coach, Mr. Van Wagner whose tips have greatly aided the individual players in ironing out the wrinkles in their play. The main fault in the aggregate this year has been their sloppy work around the basket. The Coach has concentrated on this weakness at all the practices of late and the best informed authorities on the team have issued the statement that the Coach has succeeded in overcoming the fault that has cost the team so many points this season.

The Athletics Office has stated that there has been little support from the student body this season and has expressed the hope that, now the team have shown their

"Fearful Five" To Challenge Coed Pucksters

R.V.C.-ites Fair Game for Union House Team

Sometime next week, the girls of R.V.C. will have a chance to show just how well they can play hockey if they accept a challenge from the "Fearful Five" team. The "Fearful Five" team consists of the residents of the Union, and they intend to challenge the Co-eds.

Maybe you have noticed that this super-team from the Union has only five men, but to quote one of their stars (a defenceman or a forward) "we don't need a goaler, and anyway we intend to play an every man for himself game. I think it will be the most effective type of game against these women."

For the past week the "Fearful Five" have been in strict training for this ice classic. A couple of mornings, two of their stars got up early (9:30) and did calisthenics, but they decided that they didn't need them, so now they are down to real practicing. If any of the R.V.C.-ites want to scout them, they can go up to the Union Ballroom any morning and get a line on their opponents.

And just to show their unsurmountable confidence, besides playing without a goaler, the "Fearful Five" wants it made plain that they are willing to take on any number of Co-eds. That is, Co-ed hockey players. At this point it is not known just when the game will take place, but the further doings of the Union team will be reported in the Daily and the exact date and time will soon be announced.

You'd be so nice to come home to;
You'd be so nice by the fire;
I'd give 'most all to win you o'er,
But not my brand new tire.
